Henry Irving Thinks Its Actors
Won't Be Driven to Pugilism.

Strong Casts for "The Blackmailers"

We have to be stars of a variety entertainment at Daly's Theatre on the three nights in the week when Eleonore Duse was not acting. For their services they were to receive 60 per cent. of the profits. The proposed arrangement, however, fell through, and Yvette Guilbert went to the Empire and Loie Fuller to the Strand, Terry's and Trafaigar.

LONDON, June 2.-Henry Irving gave morning performance of "Faust" on Thursday, in order to enable him to preride in the evening at the annual dinner of the Royal Theatric Fund. There were hundred and fifty notable guests a the dinner, including Sir Frederick Leighton and Baron Leopold de Rothschild. Mr. Irving made an amusing speech in which he ridiculed the prevailing idea that the theatrical depression was likely to drive actors to the pro

She was compelled to remain in the harbor about four months, and during that time Capt. Cushing was taken sick with yellow fever. He was removed to a hospital, where he died later. His young wife, who was with him, returned home on the steamer Delcomyn, which arrived here April 21.

The cook's boy was also taken sick with yellow fever about the same time as the captain, and he also died. Then, Capt. Langdon took command. No other cases of sickness were reported after the ship left Rio.

The Norwegian bark, C. Tobias, from Padang, also got into port this morning in charge of Capt. Flaystadt. She was one hundred and fourteen days making the voyage. It took Capt. baby. When pretty Vesta Tilley heard this yesterday, she put her hand in her vest pocket, pulled out a bill, and said: row, and I want to do something to bring me luck."

Miss Tilley believes in luck, and is willing to pay for it. She didn't know that there were any people in America too poor to buy medicines and food for their sick children, until "The Evening World" Fund was opened. It may as tonish her to be told that the free doc tors made 21,478 visits last month, found 1,422 sick children, many of whom were so very, very poor that the physicians had to fill their own prescriptions.

The charming little singer does a great

Can't the reader who is perfectly familiar with the workings of the Sick Babies' Fund and the ever-swelling tide of distress that washes the shores of our city contribute enough to pay for one cure or less? Subscribe a few dimes just for luck, and in brightening your lown fortune help to better some one who is worse off. Poverty isn't as bad or as hard to endure as pain. Man only needs a few clothes, a few pounds of food and a roof that doesn't leak to be comfortable, and with health and a little philosophy thrown in to be happy. But if he larks health, if his body is pain, racked, he can cujoy nothing. And that is the condition of the pensioners of the Sick Bables' Fund.

When the doctors call at the wretched homes along the rivers' edges and ask if they is anything they can do, the inevitable reply of the mother is:
"Only get my child well."

With good health the possibilities of man are all but limitless. One of the staff doctors hits the nail squarely on the head when he writes to the Chief of Corps:
"There has never, I venture to say, been a year in the history of the Fund when the children needed looking after as they do this year. The reason is plain enough. Every one knows what a hard Winter the past has been for the poor. The men have been out of work. Credit is hard to get; the pawnbrokers will lend nothing on furniture and clothes, and the results show on the children, as a case I had uptown Saturday will illustrate. I found a child with follicular-tonsilitis, but very much sicker than she would usually be. On inquiry it came out that owing to lack of work the children had been on short commons for some time, and the mother, the patient and the other child were debilitated and anaemic in consequence. The results is that the poor little ones were not in even their usual state to resist eickness, and if we would save the children now is the time. And we must work sharply to do it."
